Campiled by Smnzne nun Rooyen Before sunrise on a cold autumn morning the poet observed a lonely stork standing in the shallow water of the lake. A quick shower of rain swept over the lake and the stork was too tired to arrange its feathers that had been blown about by the strong gusty wind.

douglas livingston

The poet is painting a picture with words of a stork standing on its long thin legs in the shallow waters of an African lake at dawn. The stork appears to look both tired and sad: tired possibly because of its long flight to this spot; sad because it is all alone, its companion storks not yet having arrived.
