With the exception of Sri Lanka, South Asian countries have not achieved quality basic education - an essential measure for escaping poverty, inequality, and social exclusion. In The Political Economy of Education in South Asia, John Richards, Manzoor Ahmed, and Shahidul Islam emphasize the importance of a dynamic system for education policy. The Political Economy of Education in South Asia documents the weak core competency (reading and math) outcomes in government primary schools in India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, and Nepal, and the consequent rapid growth of non-government schools over the last two decades. It compares the training, hiring, and management of teachers in South Asian schools to successful national systems ranging from Singapore to Finland. Discussing reform options, it makes the case public good and public priorities are better served when both public and non-government providers come under a strong public policy and accountability framework. The Political Economy of Education in South Asia draws on the authors' broad engagement in education research and practice in South Asia, as well as analysis by prominent professors of education and NGO leaders, to place basic education in a broad context and make the case that universal literacy and numeracy are necessary foundations for economic growth.

Victorian Scientific Naturalism examines the secular creeds of the generation of intellectuals who, in the wake of The Origin of Species, wrested cultural authority from the old Anglican establishment while installing themselves as a new professional scientific elite. These scientific naturalists—led by biologists, physicists, and mathematicians such as William Kingdon Clifford, Joseph Dalton Hooker, Thomas Henry Huxley, and John Tyndall—sought to persuade both the state and the public that scientists, not theologians, should be granted cultural authority, since their expertise gave them special insight into society, politics, and even ethics. In Victorian Scientific Naturalism, Gowan Dawson and Bernard Lightman bring together new essays by leading historians of science and literary critics that recall these scientific naturalists, in light of recent scholarship that has tended to sideline them, and that reevaluate their place in the broader landscape of nineteenth-century Britain. Ranging in topic from daring climbing expeditions in the Alps to the maintenance of aristocratic protocols of conduct at Kew Gardens, these essays offer a series of new perspectives on Victorian scientific naturalism—as well as its subsequent incarnations in the early twentieth century—that together provide an innovative understanding of the movement centering on the issues of community, identity, and continuity.

Why have many developing countries that have succeeded in expanding access to education made such limited progress on improving learning outcomes? There is a growing recognition that the learning crisis constitutes a significant dimension of global inequality and also that educational outcomes in developing countries are shaped by political as well as socio-economic and other factors. The Politics of Education in Developing Countries focuses on how politics shapes the capacity and commitment of elites to tackle the learning crisis in six developing countries: Bangladesh, Cambodia, Ghana, Rwanda, South Africa, and Uganda. The problem of education quality is serious across the Global South. The Politics of Education in Developing Countries: From Schooling to Learning deploys a new conceptual framework—the domains of power approach—to show how the type of political settlement shapes the level of elite commitment and state capacity to improving learning outcomes. The domain of education is prone to being highly politicized, as it offers an important source of both rents and legitimacy to political elites, and can be central to paradigmatic elite ideas around nation-building and modernity. Of particular importance is the relative strength of coalitions pushing for access as against those focused on issues of higher quality education. This book concludes with a discussion of entry points and strategies for thinking and working politically in relation to education quality reforms and critical commentaries.

An Autobiography Oswaal UG CLAT Mock Test, 15 Sample Question Papers (For 2022 Exam) Book

Morning Calm (the Korean Peninsula) is a concealed microcosm of the world tweaked and a wide-open miniature of the world divided. From the outside, this Calm Land has been called a miraculously leaped-up nation defeating the ghost of the Korean War. But inside, there have been buckets of unimaginable inhumanity and irrationality, among which were smashed bodies by tanks, people who were tortured to death by prison guards in the North, the deflowered women by Japanese Imperialist troops, the U.S officers hacked by the Red, and a Korean woman lanced by a U.S soldier in the blood ally South Korea. Extreme conflicts between politicians, Chaebol and labor workers, the poor and the rich, the young and the old, splashes in the religious groups, men and women, disputes over mandatory military service, are also vividly described. Anyway, most of all, Anti-Americanism that gradually got heated through several decades distinctively began to settle down for some reasons, while Pro-Japan that contributed to the collapse of Morning Calm to Japanese Imperialism, which ripped off the skin of peace in the Pacific and East Asia, raping and beheading the innocent residents, is going to run amok in Korea again. So people need to know why these treacherous trends are hazardous to Asia, the U.S and Western countries, too. The world villagers used to say, "If a third world war break out in some places, where could be the Korean Peninsula." There have been not so many opposite opinions about it, putting Middle East incidents as just skirmishes. As much, Morning Calm is the land not only of Korea, but of the powerhouses, including the U.S, China, Japan, Russia, the U.K, France, and Germany altogether. In addition, some intertwined problems must be resolved sooner or later before the Kim's North rapidly collapses down. But, the inner puzzles would not be put together easily; Seoul and locals, duels in the sports corrals, and the chronic pain between Julla and Kyungsang provinces, so-called, the cats at the loggerheads with the dogs. Those issues have not been frequently addressed to the outside, because it has been thought just as a kind of household matter. That much, Morning Calm has existed under the cloak of concealing something false and true deep inside, but, which can explode and sink down under the water, if not proper cures from inside or outside are provided. As the Sewol ferry boat went down, this Calm Land can follow her track, too. Meanwhile, what really matters is the Korean Peninsula is becoming a clock bomb drawing and embracing the Far East and the Western Countries closer to the center of turbulence. So here, I sincerely ask all the world neighbors to pay more attentions to Morning Calm, and hustle to give your hands to cure this peninsula, which is out of hands of itself that has been always subdued with self-satisfaction and gestures like living in a narcissism mode. Once again to remind you, my readers, willy-nilly, this Morning Calm became not just a small country, but a tremendously wide and big black hole and tinder box that can swallow up the peace and prosperity that are tightly tied to the bodies of powerhouses. So I hope that my readers can take your plenty of time to read this book one page at a time and feel the throbbing tensions in a Calm Land. Lastly, I am grateful for his technical assistance, C.S.Hong, and sharing precious opinions with me, B.J.Lee.

The Little Red Cliff portrays life in the 1950s and 1960s in Tanah Merah Kechil (Little Red Cliff) in a corner of Bedok District along the eastern coast of Singapore. Author Yeo Hong Eng chronicles the story of his family, the Yeo family, as they struggled to make a living during the lean years after the Japanese Occupation. He describes in detail how his parents developed the land for farming and exploited other available resources, such as sand mining during rainy seasons, until they were forced to leave the land in 1963. He also explains how they processed coconuts into cooking oil and bamboo into food, materials for building trellises, farming accessories, and basic toys. Whether they were working in animal husbandry or in vegetable cultivation, his grandmother and parents used the age-old methods passed down from their parents and grandparents to work with the land and their animals. What's more, they made sure to take time from their work to celebrate important festivals, entertainment, and the joys and sorrows of everyday life. They attended wayangs (street plays), flew kites, and made their own playthings-shuttles, spinners, sling shots, and musical instruments-with whatever raw materials they had on hand. In The Little Red Cliff, Yeo Hong Eng shares a description of family life in Singapore in the mid-twentieth century-its lows and highs, its struggles and joys.

A long-time chief data scientist at Amazon shows how open data can make everyone, not just corporations, richer Every time we Google something, Facebook someone, Uber somewhere, or even just turn on a light, we create data that businesses collect and use to make decisions about us. In many ways this has improved our lives, yet, we as individuals do not benefit from this wealth of data as much as we could. Moreover, whether it is a bank evaluating our credit worthiness, an insurance company determining our risk level, or a potential employer deciding whether we get a job, it is likely that this data will be used against us rather than for us. In Data for the People, Andreas Weigend draws on his years as a consultant for commerce, education, healthcare, travel and finance companies to outline how Big Data can work better for all of us. As of today, how much we benefit from Big Data depends on how closely the interests of big companies align with our own. Too often, outdated standards of control and privacy force us into unfair contracts with data companies, but it doesn't have to be this way. Weigend makes a powerful argument that we need to take control of how our data is used to actually make it work for us. Only then can we the people get back more from Big Data than we give it. Big Data is here to stay. Now is the time to find out how we can be empowered by it.
