This book focuses on the history of the provision of legal aid and legal assistance to the poor in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries in eight different countries. It is the first such book to bring together historical work on legal aid in a comparative perspective, and allows readers to analogise and contrast historical narratives about free legal aid across countries. Legal aid developed as a result of industrialisation, urbanization, immigration, the rise of philanthropy, and what were viewed as new legal problems. Closely related, was the growing professionalisation of lawyers and the question of what duties lawyers owed society to perform free work. Yet, legal aid providers in many countries included lay women and men, leading at times to tensions with the bar. Furthermore, legal aid often became deeply politicized, creating dramatic conflicts concerning the rights of the poor to have equal access to justice.

Excerpt from Law Students Review and Quiz Book, in the Form of Questions Which Supply, Concrete Statements of Facts and of Answers Which Set Forth, the Legal Principles Involved Includes All Important Subjects, Conforms to the Practice of the Most Competent, Boards Of Ability correctly to apply legal principles to facts is what makes a lawyer. The aim of this book is to make lawyers; not merely to help candidates in preparing for the bar examination. Accordingly by applying important principles and doctrines of law to stated facts, it aims to give the student a taste of what he may look for upon entering the practice of the law. Within the limits of fifteen hundred questions and answers it is of course impracticable to present more than the barest outline of the law. An inspection of the work as a whole, however, should demonstrate that when the student has come to feel at home with the questions and answers, and with the principles involved, he should, upon being confronted by client or by bar examiner with facts involving the same principles, be better able to discern and state the legal principles which control. If he will not content himself with covering up the answer with a piece of blotting paper, and with seeing if on reading the question he can remember the answer; but on the contrary will rather let the question sink in, and reason out his own answer, correcting the result, if correction be needed, by the answer in the book, he will get the full benefit of my efforts and of his own. The writer has examined several thousands of applicants for the bar; and as a result, these pages betoken the earnest hope that candidates may be induced and helped to depend less on memory, and more on the power of analysis and reasoning. To spend time (and money) learning by rote scores of detached definitions, maxims, rules and precepts, but to omit to apply them again and again, is to invite failure. The best and fairest law examinations search a students power of discerning, of reasoning, of applying what he has learned, rather than his memory. The main purpose of this study is to evaluate the present state of legal aid in China. On one level, this is an easy question. All measures of quantity indicate real progress since the Chinese government decided to construct a national legal aid system in 1994. Since then, the Ministry of Justice has established 32,000 legal aid organizations and over 55,000 legal aid stations at the county, district, provincial, and municipal levels. Yet upon closer inspection, these figures raise as many questions as they answer. How many citizens need aid but didn't receive it? What impact did the legal aid experience have on those who sought assistance? What types of cases were handled, and perhaps more importantly, what types of cases weren't? This study seeks to identify answers to these and other questions.
