An innocent raised in a house of sin ... Lily is the product of a doomed romance between Neal Kale, a dashing aristocrat, and Zara, a beautiful high-class prostitute. Against all odds, Zara manages to shelter her daughter from the depravity of her life, accepting brutalization and humiliation to do so. But when she is diagnosed with a terminal disease, Zara entreats Lily to flee the violent world of her birth and seek shelter with her father's family. She gives Lily the jeweled Kale family locket that Neal had given her many years ago as proof of her identity. Lily does not receive a warm welcome at the Kale estate and is unsure of whether she is a lady or a servant. She must learn to navigate the complexities of a sophisticated society. She is wooed by a groom who works in the stables. She also attracts the attention of an arrogant cavalry officer, even as she faces contempt and ridicule in the glittering circle of her father's family. She's dogged by her mother's old pimp and madam, who wish to drag her into her mother's debauched profession. Torn between a world she seeks to escape and one that will not accept her, Lily must decide whether to settle for safety or risk everything to follow her heart.

The Gentleman's Magazine Routledge

"Lylin is not used to being alone--much less alone, hurt, and lost. So when she is separated from her guard and forced to abandon her horse, she counts herself lucky to stumble upon a manor house. Still frightened by those who chased her into the night, she keeps her identity a secret, calling herself Lily as she accepts the help of kind servants and the compassion of Lord Fallon. When they fall into an easy friendship, she wonders if her secrecy was too hasty. However, as she gets to know the manor and its residents, Lylin discovers that she's not the only one hiding secrets, and it may be a very good thing that her host doesn't know her true identity as a member of the royal family." -- from p. [4] cover.

The Works of Lord Byron, in Verse and Prose, Including His Letters, Journals, Etc

"Which one of you bitches is my mother?" Four elegant, successful, and sophisticated women in their forties are called to New York's Pierre Hotel to meet Lili -- a beautiful, young, and notoriously temperamental Hollywood movie star. None of the women knows exactly why she is there; each has a reason to hate Lili and each of them is astonished to see the others. They are old friends who share a guilty secret and who have for years been doing their best to keep that secret quiet. Their lives are changed forever, however, when Lili suddenly confronts them. When the women refuse to answer her, Lili proceeds to travel around the world through the playgrounds of the rich and famous, seeking to answer the question that has obsessed and almost destroyed her. From Paris to London, from the boardroom to the bedroom, "Lace" takes the reader into the rarified world of five unforgettable women who are as beautiful, as complex and as strong as...lace.
