Shakar Luminarium

has been awarded the Los Angeles Times Book Prize in Fiction: "Bold, ambitious, and dazzling with ideas and narrative energy, Luminarium is a novel that refuses to settle for contrivance as it goes after the hard truths of family life, technology, culture, and urban experience. Alex Shakar Shakar is such an engaging writer, bringing rich complications to the narrative.... At times, Luminarium reads like a Christopher Nolan

or Wachowski
brothers movie as scripted by Don DeLillo. " (The

ordinarily choose. Twins who are game developers? One in a coma, the other struggling to make sense of his life outside the virtual worlds he creates? Luminarium by Alex Shakar (2011, Hardcover) for sale ... Luminarium By Alex Shakar Soho Press. It ' s the summer of 2006 in New York. Fred Brounian ' s twin brother and former co-CEO, George, lies comatose and dying of cancer in a hospital. The virtual-reality company they founded together has been stolen out from under them by a military-contracting conglomerate, which has since laid Fred off.
