A second example to demonstrate Oberman's method of structuring Luther's context is his treatment of Luther's parents and his youth. While he only devoted part of a chapter to constructing the context of Luther's youth (82-97), his proceeding applications of Luther's parents' influence shed new (at least new to this author) light on their extensive part in Luther's life.

Without Authority: Luther: Man Between God and the Devil

Luther: Man Between God And The Devil is the definitive biography of the central figure of the Protestant Reformation. Published in 1982 in Germany to great acclaim, the book portrays the controversial reformer in the context of his own time. Oberman argues that Luther is more the medieval monk than history has usually regarded him.

Luther: Man Between God and the Devil On WTM 's recommendation, I've been reading Heiko Oberman's impressive biography Luther: Man Between God and the Devil . As the title implies, Luther's vivid conception of the Devil figures prominently in the book, perhaps because one of Oberman's goals is to present Luther in all of his glorious strangeness.

Heiko Oberman's book, Luther: Man between God and the Devil, explores Martin Luther's life, theology and legacy. Oberman does not simply focus on Luther's actions and behaviors as a Reformer, nor does he evaluate Luther from a purely Protestant or Catholic point of view. Instead, the book examines Luther's continual battle with the Devil.

Oberman, Heiko A., Luther, Man between God and the Devil, Translated by Eileen Walliser-Schwarzbart (New Haven, Yale University Press, 1989) Paperback edition published 2006. This is the third biography I have read of Luther, and it may be the best single volume 'intellectual' biography, which deals a bit more with those currents which influenced his thought than some other volumes.

Martin Luther: Man Between God and the Devil

Luther: Man Between God and the Devil is divided into three parts with a total of eleven chapters. Acting as book-ends there is a prologue and an epilogue. Part I titled "The Longed-for Reformation" considers the Reformation as "A German Event," "A Medieval Event," and "An Elemental Event" (chapters 1-3).

Luther: Man Between God and the Devil - Heiko Augustinus ...

Luther, commenting on Gen. 1:26-27, summarizes the church's historical view of the image of God, citing Augustine. The image of God in man, he says, is generally agreed to be "the powers of the soul—memory, the mind or intellect, and will."
