Japanese Color TV Service Manual No. 3 Springer
This handbook compares and contrasts two methods employed in price indexes to adjust for quality change: conventional quality adjustment methods and hedonic price indexes. The latter are often used in price indexes for information and communication technology (ICT) products in several OECD countries, as well as for measuring prices for some other goods and services, notably housing. The handbook aims to contribute to a better understanding of the merits and shortcomings of these methods, and to provide an analytic basis for choosing among them.

Featuring scholarly perspectives from around the globe and drawing on a legacy of television studies, but with an eye toward the future, this authoritative collection examines both the thoroughly global nature of television and the multiple and varied experiences that constitute television in the twenty-first century. Companion chapters include original essays by some of the leading scholars of television studies as well as emerging voices engaging television on six continents, offering readers a truly global range of perspectives. The volume features multidisciplinary analyses that offer models and guides for the study of global television, with approaches focused on the theories, audiences, content, culture, and institutions of television. A wide array of examples and case studies engage the transforming practices, technologies, systems, and texts constituting television around the world today, providing readers with a contemporary and multi-faceted perspective. In this volume, editor Shawn Shimpach has brought together an essential guide to understanding television in the world today, how it works and what it means — perfect for students, scholars, and anyone else interested in television, global media studies, and beyond.
