May Day Eve
(Ireland) April 30
According to Irish
legend, the fairy
people fight among themselves on the eve of May Day. Every seven years, the combat is especially intense, for they compete with one
another for the crops,
taking the best ears of wheat, barley, and oats as their prize.

May Day Eve and Other Stories by Nick Joaquín

Summary: In the late 1840's, when it was already May Eve they said that the dancing should stop at 10 o'clock in the evening.

Until the celebration was over, the guests started to decamp but the girls just went to their bedroom while the boys just continued what they are doing and finished their drink.
