rising demand. It is vital that advanced practice registered nurses (APRNs) and primary care practitioners take active roles in assessing behavioral health presentations and work collaboratively with families and other healthcare professionals to ensure that all children and adolescents receive appropriate treatment.

This case describes the sales of Dynamic Medical Solutions (DMS), a medical products supplier (as a retailer of products manufactured by others), whose reimbursements for sales made to customers eligible for Medicare and Medicaid appear to be in violation of government reimbursement guidelines. The case is an illustration of one of the major emerging trends in management accounting: expansion of profitability analysis from cost allocations focused primarily on product costs to sales channels and/or customer types, including the allocation of non-product costs. This real-world case requires students to first understand the dilemma faced by the company, including information regarding certain products and sales channels and related product cost data, departmental processes, and related operating expenses from its latest year of operations. The student's task is to evaluate alternatives the company should consider with regard to cost allocations to specific products and sales channels along with their resulting impact on product pricing and channel profitability. Students will then be in a position to make recommendations ensuring both qualitative and quantitative compliance with government regulations for Medicare and Medicaid reimbursements.

D & B Million Dollar Directory Kennedy Information

The federal government operates six major health care programs that serve nearly 100 million Americans. Collectively, these programs significantly influence how health care is provided by the private sector. Leadership by Example explores how the federal government can leverage its unique position as regulator, purchaser, provider, and research sponsor to improve care - not only in these six programs but also throughout the nation's health care system. The book describes the federal programs and the populations they serve: Medicare (elderly), Medicaid (low income), SCHIP (children), VHA (veterans), TRICARE (individuals in the military and their dependents), and IHS (native Americans). It then examines the steps each program takes to assure and improve safety and quality of care. The Institute of Medicine proposes a national quality enhancement strategy focused on performance measurement of clinical quality and patient perceptions of care. The discussion on which this book focuses includes recommendations for developing and pilot-testing performance measures, creating an information infrastructure for comparing performance and disseminating results, and more. Leadership by Example also includes a proposed research agenda to support quality enhancement. The third in the series of books from the Quality of Health Care in America project, this well-targeted volume will be important to all readers of To Err Is Human and Crossing the Quality Chasm - as well as new readers interested in the federal government's role in health care.

"This report is all about people and using computers to connect them and their healthcare information. It is a report about how we get consumers and clinicians to use these tools, how we pay for them, and what we want the computers to do. But computers are only a tool, a means to an end. We have focused this report on computers because they seem to be the best tool--and maybe the only tool--that will allow the nation to change the way healthcare works... This report articulates a vision of an information-connected healthcare system, where consumers' privacy is protected and their convenience facilitated, where doctors and nurses have the information they need to efficiently deliver safe and effective care, where our public health and homeland security can be protected while still guarding each individual's privacy. The report recommends specific actions and broader policy objectives, all with the goal of allowing healthcare to effectively use computers and information technology. If followed, the Commission's recommendations will accelerate healthcare's transformation." [From Foreword].
