Through the "Bender mystery" the legend of the "men in black" (MIB) came into the world-even though, as Barker observed, a man in black had played a villainous role in the Maury Island incident. According to Barker, the MIB were ranging as far afield as Australia and New Zealand, scaring still more UFO buffs into silence.

The Men in Black always appear unannounced, are usually clad in black business suits, and warn people to give up their research into UFOs or face dire consequences. In many cases, the Men in Black have also seen aliens—in some accounts, they are aliens themselves or some form of “demonic supernaturals.”

It's wild to think a movie like Men in Black, that spawned a franchise could still claim it has made no money. But creative accounting has rendered it so. Movie accounting is famously fickle and shady. When your agent or lawyer negotiates for the back end of a movie, there's little chance you'll ever see it even if that movie is a massive hit.
