It's Like a New Car Smell. Everybody knows the smell of a new car. It's a crisp, clean, and somewhat mysterious scent. It's often the key factor in confirming that a car is genuinely new, and as it turns out, it's actually just the smell of vaguely-toxic chemicals. (These chemicals don't pose a serious health risk, but more on that ...

This is definitely a strong metallic smell, more so than a taste. While I was out walking, it was intermittent. Seems like if it were from Fukushima or a plant venting across the lake in Wisconsin, I would smell it everywhere. However, last year after Fukushima, I could smell it from town to town as I traveled for work.
