This United States Army Military Police manual, Army Techniques Publication ATP 3-39.30 Security and Mobility Support May 2020, examines the military police discipline of security and mobility support and how military police support Army, joint, and multinational forces by conducting the tactical tasks and activities associated with security and mobility support. ATP 3-39.30 provides military police commanders, staffs, and Soldiers a foundation for the conduct of security and mobility support across the range of military operations. The focus is primarily on those tactical tasks and activities (facilitated by military police technical capabilities) that enable the elements of combat power. It describes how military police are employed to protect the force and noncombatants and how they facilitate the preservation of the commander's freedom of action. The security and mobility support discipline enables and is enabled by the other military police disciplines of police operations and detention operations. Each discipline is seen through a policing or corrections lens and is driven by the integrating function of police intelligence. Police intelligence operations (PIO) support commanders at all levels through the integration of police intelligence activities within all military police operations. The disciplines are interdependent areas of expertise within the Military Police Corps Regiment. The tasks in this discipline are focused on those military police tasks that are typically performed in a tactical environment, and while military police are the proponent for many of these tasks, some of these tasks may also be performed by other members of the combined arms team. Military police conducting tasks within the security and mobility support discipline are typically in a support role. These tasks are primarily focused on applying military police combat power in support of the movement and maneuver and protection warfighting functions; however, security and mobility tasks also support the conduct of populace and resources control (PRC). Military police perform many security and mobility support tasks and activities in the support area, making them a significant enabler to the sustainment warfighting function. Security and mobility support is enabled and facilitated by the technical tasks embodied in the military police disciplines of police operations and detention operations. These disciplines and the integrating function of PIO are described in-depth in other military police manuals and will be referred to when they are critical to discussions supporting the discipline of security and mobility support. ATP 3-39.30 includes significant changes from previous versions. It is divided into five chapters and four appendixes.

During the World War II campaign to seize the island of Okinawa, Operation Iceberg, U.S. Tenth Army employed a significant U.S. Army and U.S. Marine Corps military police structure. However, the challenges posed to these units by military traffic, nearly 300,000 enemy civilians, and over 10,000 prisoners of war are issues largely neglected by historians. This study analyzes the overall effectiveness and value of the largest joint military police operation in the Pacific theater. It evaluates military police force structure and operations by assessing pre-campaign planning and results of operations with extant historical doctrine, operational setting, and historical information. Historical military police doctrine is discussed to identify standards which existed in 1945. Intelligence or other information about the operational environment is examined for relevance to doctrine. Finally, historical accounts or information about military police operations are contrasted with doctrine and operational setting. Historical information is assessed within five mission areas; traffic control operations, prisoner of war operations, civilian handling operations, security operations, and law and order operations. Within these mission areas information is further organized by unit, time, and relation to the tactical situation. Detailed assessment and evaluation reveal Tenth Army military police overall effectiveness and value in Operation Iceberg.

This field manual (FM) addresses military police (MP) maneuver and mobility support (MMS), area security (AS), internment and resettlement (I/R), law and order (L&O), and police intelligence operations (PIO) across the full spectrum of Army operations. Although this manual includes a discussion of corps and division MP elements, it primarily focuses on the principles of platoon operations and the tactics, techniques, and procedures (TTP) the platoon uses to accomplish its mission. This FM provides the capabilities and organization of the MP, demonstrates the flexibility and diversity of MP in adapting to any mission throughout the full spectrum of Army operations, and characterizes the MP as a combat-force multiplier. Additionally, this manual identifies the fact that the Army will not conduct operations alone and defines the role of the MP in support of joint, multinational, and interagency operations. The MP TTP are organized by the MP functions of MMS, AS, I/R, LO, and PIO with supporting tasks, both individual and collective, to help illustrate the functions.

Army Tactics, Techniques, and Procedures (ATTP) 3-39.20 is the manual for police intelligence operations (PIO) doctrine. This manual aligns with Field Manual (FM) 3-39, the Military Police Corps Regiment's keystone manual, and other Army and joint doctrine. Simultaneous operations that combine offensive, defensive, and stability or civil support operations are emphasized. PIO is a military police function that supports the operations process and protection activities by providing exceptional police information and intelligence to enhance situational understanding, protection of the force, and homeland security (HLS). This manual emphasizes that PIO supports, enhances, and contributes to the commander's protection program and situational understanding by analyzing, integrating, and portraying relevant criminal threat and police information and intelligence that may affect the operational environment (OE). This threat information is gathered by military police Soldiers as they conduct military police functions and by other Army Soldiers, Service policing forces, multinational elements, and security forces. This manual is written for military police and United States Criminal Investigation Command (USACIDC) Soldiers and civilians conducting the PIO function. This manual is focused on establishing the framework of PIO, how PIO supports military police and Army operations, and how to integrate PIO within the other four military police functions: law and order (L&O), internment and resettlement (I/R), maneuver and mobility support (MMS), and area security (AS). In addition to the revisions already mentioned, this manual: - Identifies the fundamentals of PIO and synchronizes PIO doctrine and task alignment to the Army Universal Task List. - Refines and clarifies key PIO-related definitions. - Highlights the critical integration of PIO throughout the other four military police functions. - Clarifies the relationship of PIO to the Army's intelligence process and the other integrating processes of Army operations. - Demonstrates the capability to collect and process relevant police information. - Acknowledges the ability of military police and USACIDC personnel to collect, process, and analyze evidence (including forensic and biometric information) during full spectrum operations. - Applies lessons learned through the conduct of recent operational experiences. - Validates the application of PIO across the spectrum of conflict.

Future operations will occur in complex, chaotic, violent, and uncertain operational environments against peer and near-peer threats. These threats are significantly more dangerous in terms of capability and magnitude than those we faced over the last 17 years of conflict. Our Army will accomplish its mission by supporting the joint force through four strategic roles: shape operational environment, prevent conflict, conduct large-scale ground combat, and consolidate gains. The strategic roles clarify the enduring reasons for which the United States Army is organized, trained, and equipped. FM 3-39, Military Police Operations, describes the operational doctrine for the Military Police Corps Regiment. The revision of FM 3-39 reorients military police support to largescale ground combat while simultaneously supporting other types of operations around the world to prevent peer and near-peer adversaries from gaining positions of relative advantage. Our Army remains the strongest and best land fighting force in the world and the Military Police Corps remains critical to its success. The role of the Military Police Corps is to provide the Army with Soldiers who are professionals in policing, investigations, and corrections. Our military police disciplines of police operations, detention operations, and security and mobility support combined with our core competencies enables us to protect and preserve the force, enable maneuver, and shape the security environment both at home stations and in support of combat operations enabling commanders to apply maximum combat power in support of decisive action any place in the world-against any enemy. As Army professionals, our doctrine is designed to be our body of professional knowledge that guides how Soldiers perform tasks to fight and win our nations wars. Doctrine serves as the starting point for thinking about how to plan, direct, execute and assess our conduct of operations. Doctrine provides a coherent vision of warfare. Enhances our operational effectiveness. Provides a common frame of reference and cultural perspective to view. Provides a common professional language, which we must know. Highlights our Military Police contributions in support of the Army's four strategic roles within Unified Action. All, while discussing the desirable character traits required in our Soldiers and leaders of today. We must not just read, but read and understand our doctrine. FM 3-39, Military Police Operations, is rooted in time-tested principles and fundamentals that accommodates for new technologies and organizational changes.

Military Police Operations In The Okinawa Campaign Independently Published

This is the latest edition of an important U.S. Army field manual (FM 19-10) covering the "law and order" duties of the military police (MP). This field manual (FM) discusses each element of the MP law and order mission. It addresses law enforcement operations, investigations, confinement of US military prisoners, and terrorism counteraction. This field manual will assist military police in understanding how each of these elements is an essential part of their law and order mission. Commanders will find it useful in understanding how MP help support the fulfillment of command responsibilities. Because many aspects of the MP law and order mission are undertaken largely to provide a safe environment for the total Army community, much of the discussion in this FM is devoted to MP law and order responsibilities in a peacetime environment.?

Military Police Operations by the Us Army and the Us Marine Corps

In 1996, the United States (US) Army Military Police (MP) Corps restructured its four combat support (CS) missions into the following five CS functions. These functions adequately describe MP capabilities in support of US forces deployed worldwide. Maneuver and mobility support. Area security. Law and order (L&O). Internment/resettlement (I/R). Police intelligence operations. Field Manual (FM) 3-19.40 depicts the doctrinal foundation, principles, and processes that MP will employ when dealing with enemy prisoners of war (EPWs), civilian internees (CIS), US military prisoner operations, and MP support to civil-military operations (populace and resource control [PRCI], humanitarian assistance [HA], and emergency services [ESI]). FM 3-19.40 is not a standalone manual, and it must be used in combination with other publications. These publications are pointed out throughout the manual, and a consolidated list is provided in the bibliography. This manual provides guidance that can be used by US Army service schools, students, sister services, and federal agencies. It is fully compatible with current joint, multinational, and interagency doctrine. The proponent of this publication is HQ TRADOC. Field Manual FM 3-19. 4 (Formerly FM 19-4) Military Police Leaders' Handbook Including Change 1 August 2002

The foundations of military police operations are based on the successful employment of military police Soldiers, past and present. This manual describes the military police support provided to Army forces that are conducting unified land operations within the framework of joint operations and increases the emphasis on simultaneous offensive, defensive, and stability tasks and the critical discussion of defense support of civil authorities. Military police (MP) support Marine air-ground task force operations during peace, conflict, and war. As described in the National Defense Strategy and The Long War: Send in the Marines, there is an unparalleled need for police skills worldwide as terrorists, insurgents, and criminal technology advancements increase. Military police identify and help reduce these threats at all levels of conflict across the range of military operations and provide support within assigned areas through performance of their mission and support capabilities.

This field manual (FM) addresses military police (MP) maneuver and mobility support (MMS), area security (AS), internment and resettlement (I/R), law and order (L&O), and police intelligence operations (PIO) across the full spectrum of Army operations. Although this manual includes a discussion of corps and division MP elements, it primarily focuses on the principles of platoon operations and the tactics, techniques, and procedures (TTP) the platoon uses to accomplish its mission. This FM provides the capabilities and organization of the MP, demonstrates the flexibility and diversity of MP in adapting to any mission throughout the full spectrum of Army operations, and characterizes the MP as a combat-force multiplier. Additionally, this manual identifies the fact that the Army will not conduct operations alone and defines the role of the MP in support of joint, multinational, and interagency operations. The MP TTP are organized by the MP functions of MMS, AS, I/R, LO, and PIO with supporting tasks, both individual and collective, to help illustrate the functions.

Military Police Soldier's Manual, Skill Level 5

ATTP 3-39.20 is the manual for police intelligence operations (PIO) doctrine. ATTP 3-39.20 aligns with Field Manual (FM) 3-39, the Military Police Corps Regiment's keystone manual, and other Army and joint doctrine. Simultaneous operations that combine offensive, defensive, and stability or civil support operations are emphasized. PIO is a military police function that supports the operations process and protection activities by providing exceptional police information and intelligence to enhance situational understanding, protection of the force, and homeland security (HLS). This manual is written for military police and United States Criminal Investigation Command (USACIDC) Soldiers and civilians conducting the PIO function. This manual is focused on establishing the framework of PIO, how PIO supports military police and Army operations, and how to integrate PIO within the other four military police functions: law and order (L&O), internment and resettlement (I/R), maneuver and mobility support (MMS), and area security (AS). The manual is organized into six chapters with three appendixes to provide additional details on selected operational topics. The first three chapters describe PIO aspects of the OE and the integration of police intelligence in military police functions and operations. The remaining chapters discuss sources of police information, analysis, production, and dissemination of police information and police intelligence. * Chapter 1 describes the OE, with particular focus on the nature and scope of modern conflict as well as important variables of the OE as described in FM 3-39 and other doctrine. The discussion is not a repeat of the information in previous manuals but, rather, it is focused specifically on those aspects of the OE that generate requirements for PIO. The chapter also defines and establishes the framework for PIO and police intelligence support to full spectrum operations. * Chapter 2 discusses PIO integration within the military police functions and highlights the critical role that PIO serves in relation to the other four functions. * Chapter 3 discusses the application and integration of PIO in the operations process and the supporting integrating processes: intelligence preparation of the battlefield (IPB); targeting; intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance (ISR) synchronization (and the associated continuing activity of integration); composite risk management (CRM); and knowledge management (KM). * Chapter 4 describes sources of police information used to support analysis. * Chapter 5 focuses on the analysis of police information. This chapter discusses the critical thinking and predictive analysis techniques applied by trained police intelligence analysts to support the formation of a holistic common operating picture (COP) and continuously feed the operations process. * Chapter 6 discusses the production of police intelligence products. This chapter provides a brief description of some of the more common products that may be produced by the military police or USACIDC staff and their associated analysts. The chapter also discusses police intelligence networks. * Appendix A provides information on briefing and debriefing requirements in support of PIO. * Appendix B addresses applicable laws, regulations, and directives most relevant to the PIO collection efforts. Additionally, it provides a summary of each document (with respect to its relevancy and applicability to the PIO function) and its restrictions and provisions to Army law enforcement (LE) and the conduct of PIO.* Appendix C identifies initiatives used by other agencies in an effort to facilitate necessary interaction and the timely exchange of police information and intelligence. This ATTP provides the operational architecture and guidance for military police commanders and trainers at all echelons for the integration and instruction of PIO for established curriculum in the Army's education system.
