One thing that quickly becomes evident on reading A Life in Our Times is that John Kenneth Galbraith is enormously impressed with the
accomplishments of
John Kenneth
Galbraith. And you can ' t really fault him for it. I ' ve met plenty of people who are far more impressed with themselves than they have any right to be.

“ I have often asked myself: in the absence of references to our religion and religious tradition – and the language we have inherited from it that infuses our debates – in what terms can a political leader or any public figure today make reference to shared moral values? Some who fear religious dogmatism would exclude all religious arguments from the public square, but might the better way forward not be, as Rowan Williams suggests ...
