Needful Things has Stephen King at his best in some places and at his worst in others. First, the good: Needful Things gives you 950 pages of classic King doing something he's really, really figured out how to do well: lock some average Joes in an enclosed space (usually a small town or a single building), introduce some horror/paranormal catalyst, and then bring it all to a slow boil before your eyes.

Needful Things (1993) - IMDb
Needful Things is set in the town of Castle Rock (a common location for a lot of King's stories), where one day a new shop opens up called "Needful Things". Owned by a mysterious elderly man named Leland Gaunt, the shop sells items that fit the desires of each of the town's inhabitants; Gaunt gives away each item to that person in exchange for them pulling a prank on someone else in town.
