A recurring theme in the literature is that simulation is a positive teaching strategy when compared to other methods of instruction and produces positive student outcomes (Jefferies, 2016).

Simulation provides educators a way to reproduce a clinical teaching experience in a safe, supportive learning environment.

The purpose of this quantitative research study was to determine whether an obstetrical simulation educational experience is an effective strategy for educating undergraduate nursing students in the management of a postpartum hemorrhage. A quasi-experimental study using a pre-test and post-test design was employed in a Women's Health Course and Pediatrics course over one semester. A single convenience sample (N=81) of junior baccalaureate nursing students was used for this study. There were 41 students in the control group and 40 in the experimental group. Both the control and experimental groups received the traditional didactic session, case study, skills lab instruction, and clinical. In addition, the experimental group received the postpartum simulation. This simulation study tested the differences in knowledge, satisfaction, and confidence level between junior nursing students who did and did not participate in the simulation. There were three instruments used during this study; a pre-test/post-test for knowledge acquisition, the National League for Nursing (NLN) (2005) student satisfaction and confidence level survey, and the Creighton Competency Evaluation Instrument (C-CEI) (Todd, Manz, Hawkins, Parsons, & Hercinger, 2008). The pre-test/post-test measured the knowledge acquisition obtained from the didactic session. NLN (2005) student satisfaction and confidence level survey measured students' satisfaction and confidence level from either the interactive skills lab sessions or the simulation. The C-CEI tool measured the students' performance during the simulation. There were four categories: assessment, communication, clinical judgment, and patient safety that the researcher measured the students' performance during the simulation. Data for the knowledge acquisition, revealed both the experimental and control groups significantly increased between the pre-test and the post-test. The post-test showed statistically significant differences between groups, with the control group outperforming the experimental group. As such, the data demonstrate that the simulation did not have a significant effect on knowledge. Data from the NLN (2005) student satisfaction and confidence level survey were analyzed using a two group MANOVA. Although the results of the MANOVA were not significant, as a follow up analysis, the individual questions were used as the dependent variables in a MANOVA. When the individual questions were used as the dependent variables in a MANOVA, the experimental group performed significantly better in two out of the five questions on student satisfaction and five out of the nine questions on student self-confidence. There was a strong positive correlation between satisfaction with current learning and self-confidence. Data for the students' performance were analyzed using the C-CEI tool. A perfect score on the C-CEI instrument was 14 points, 100%. The overall group average was 8.1 points or 58%. Of the four sections in the C-CEI tool, the lowest mean was Communication (0.5185), followed by Patient Safety (mean = 0.5333). Although student groups were able to communicate with the patient effectively 67% of the time, none of the simulation groups provided an organized report to the healthcare provider with minimal prompting. During the postpartum simulation, 33% of the students administered medications safely. The wrong dosage and incorrect technique were seen in 67% of the simulations. Communication and safe medication practice are essential to ensuring patient safety; it is important that faculty prepare nursing graduates to provide safe care. Even though there were limitations to this study, a convenience sample at one public university, the findings are informative and have implications for future teaching and learning strategies. The results of this study add to the body of knowledge that supports the use of simulation as a teaching strategy in undergraduate nursing education. A comprehensive survey of family-centered pediatric nursing care Child Health Nursing: Partnering with Children & Families promotes excellence in nursing care for infants, children, and adolescents--in hospitals and in the community. It focuses on the importance of partnering with families to adapt care plans for children based on their age, health status, and social and cultural influences. The text considers the impact of contemporary care environments on nursing practice, both in health promotion and in the care of children with acute or chronic health conditions. By offering industry best practices and practical applications, the book encourages students to apply evidence-based findings and clinical reasoning to planning superior care. The updated 3rd edition explains how modern nursing practice is affected by reforms to healthcare and its delivery--such as electronic health records, new approaches to chronic and acute condition management, and a focus on prevention. To support safe, effective, and innovative care, this edition draws on the latest recommendations of NANDA International diagnoses, Nursing Intervention Classifications number, nurses make up the single largest segment of the health care work force. They also spend the greatest amount of time in delivering patient care as a profession. Nurses therefore have valuable insights and unique abilities to contribute as partners with other health care professionals in improving the quality and safety of care as envisioned in the Affordable Care Act (ACA) enacted this year. Nurses should be fully engaged with other health professionals and assume leadership roles in redesigning care in the United States. To ensure its members are well-prepared, the profession should institute residency training for nurses, increase the percentage of nurses who attain a bachelor's degree to 80 percent by 2020, and double the number who pursue doctorates. Furthermore, regulatory and institutional obstacles -- including limits on nurses' scope of practice -- should be removed so that the health system can reap the full benefit of nurses' training, skills, and knowledge in patient care. In this book, the Institute of Medicine makes recommendations for an action-oriented blueprint for the future of nursing.

NLN PAX RN and PN Study Guide 2021-2022 Ascencia Test Prep Nurses make up the largest segment of the health care profession, with 3 million registered nurses in the United States. Nurses work in a wide variety of settings, including hospitals, public health centers, schools, and homes, and provide a continuum of services, including direct patient care, health promotion, patient education, and coordination of care. They serve in leadership roles, are researchers, and work to improve health care policy. As the health care system undergoes transformation due in part to the Affordable Care Act (ACA), the nursing profession is making a wide-reaching impact by providing and affecting quality, patient-centered, accessible, and affordable care. In 2010, the Institute of Medicine (IOM) released the report The Future of Nursing: Leading Change, Advancing Health, which made a series of recommendations pertaining to roles for nurses in the new health care landscape. This current report assesses progress made by the Robert Wood Johnson

Foundation/AARP Future of Nursing: Campaign for Action and others in implementing the recommendations from the 2010 report and identifies areas that should be emphasized over the next 5 years to make further progress toward these goals. Test Catalog Nursing Practice Assessment Series Simon and Schuster The fourth edition of Certified Nurse Educator (CNE®/CNE®n) Review is designed to help you prepare for the National League for Nursing (NLN)

The Institute of Medicine study Crossing the Quality Chasm (2001) recommended that an interdisciplinary summit be held to further reform of health professions education in order to enhance quality and patient safety. Health Professions Education: A Bridge to Quality is the follow up to that summit, held in June 2002, where 150 participants across disciplines and occupations developed ideas about how to integrate a core set of competencies into health professions education. These core competencies include patient-centered care, interdisciplinary teams, evidence-based practice, quality improvement, and informatics. This book recommends a mix of approaches to health education improvement, including those related to oversight processes, the training environment, research, public reporting, and leadership. Educators, administrators, and health professionals can use this book to help achieve an approach to education that better prepares clinicians to meet both the needs of patients and the requirements of a changing health care system.
