"Aristotle classified the things in the world into ten categories: substance, quantity, quality, relation, etcetera. Plotinus, the founder of Neoplatonism, attacked the classification, accepting only the first four categories, rejecting the other six, and adding one of his own: change. He preferred Plato's classification into five kinds, including change. In this part of his commentary, Simplicius records

the controversy on the six categories
rejected by Plotinus: acting,
being acted upon,
being in a
position, when,
where, and having
on. Plotinus' pupil
and editor,
Porphyry, defended
all six categories
as applicable to the physical world,
even if not to the world of Platonic

Forms to which Platonist studies
must eventually progress.
Porphyry's pupil, Iamblichus, went further: taken in a suitable sense, Aristotle's
categories apply
also to the world of Forms, although they require Pythagorean
reinterpretation.
Simplicius may be closer to Porphyry
than to Iamblichus,

and indeed Porphyry's defense
established
Aristotle's
categories once and for all in Western thought. But the controversy of this period nonetheless
revealed more effectively than any modern discussion the profound difficulties in Aristotle's
categorical
scheme."--Jacket.
