Dawn does a good job leading the reader via emotion despite this limitation. Why this book stands out: It's psychological, suspenseful, thrilling, romantic, and hopeful all at the same time. It's an emotionally taxing piece, which means you'll run the entire gamut between fear and despair, joy and victory.

The book "Oblivion" written by Sasha Dawn told a story about a girl with amnesia who has been plagued by graphomania - an obsession with words. Personally, I enjoyed this book very much because it hooked me up all the way until the end.

My third book for teen audiences, BLINK, has been nominated for the coveted EDGAR AWARD in the category of young adult! To be honest, I was unaware that the warriors at Lerner Books had submitted it for consideration, when my phone pinged with a Twitter alert.

Oblivion By: Sasha Dawn (WoW #11)

Sasha Dawn teaches writing at community colleges and offers pro bono writing workshops to local schools. She lives in her native northern Illinois, where she collects tap shoes, fabric swatches, and tales of survival, and she harbors a crush on Thomas Jefferson.

OBLIVION by Sasha Dawn | Kirkus Reviews

Dawn's novel is set apart from other young adult novels because of her realistic representation of mental illness. Graphomania is not a widely known and understood disease, so Dawn is forced to explain the compulsion in depth while not deviating from the story told from Callie's troubled point of view.

Sasha Dawn has done an amazing job of putting us right in the thick of Callie's thoughts, fears, and the incredible journey of someone who suffers with graphomania {a compulsion to write}. The book is written in a way where you're not 100% sure where the next turn is going to take you, but I promise it's all resolved at the end.
