A tile cutter with a diamond blade works to smooth the edges of glass. I bought one at a garage sale to cut slate tiles and found it also works to finish glass edges. Mine has a way to tilt the blade also. I first lightly run the glass edges at a 90 degree angle against the diamond saw blade, IE, with the blade straight up and down.

Draw the wheel along the glass from edge to edge only once in a slow, even motion. At the far edge of the cut, roll the cutter gently over the edge of the glass, easing up a bit so it doesn't jam onto the cutting surface. There should be a light scratching or crackling sound indicating the wheel is marking the glass.
