Journalism
is the activity and product of gathering, assessing, creating and presenting news and information. Print and broadcast journalism were traditionally the way that we consumed news, but technology is revolutionizing the way that information is presented, leading to a variety of new online journalism outlets. What is online journalism? - Quora No longer merely "writing for the Web", "online journalism" is a term which now encompasses a range of skills as broad as journalism itself, including subjects that together could fill an entire undergraduate course: from online video and audio to data and visual journalism, social media and community management, advanced search techniques and verification, new ethical and legal considerations, and programming.

Online journalism unlike print journalism has an infinite number of pages, which mean space is not an issue. This therefore means that articles and stories can be lengthy in nature since there is no page limit. It is easier and cheaper to produce news online than it is to produce it on newspapers and magazines. There isn't much of a deadline to beat in online journalism when reporters are posting stories and articles. With online journalism, news is spread with lightening speed.
