The P89 was basically a combination of being a product-improved version of the P85 MKII and a commercial version of Ruger's XM10 submission for the second round of the DoD pistol trials of the 1980s. The P89 standardized the improved firing pin safety system, an grub screw secured rear sight and had an improved (thicker) barrel link, and improved accuracy due to a modifications to the barrel ...

Ruger P85 MkII - Gear - IllinoisCarry.com

I have owned my P85 Mk II since March 1990. This was my first Ruger purchase. I had to send it back to Ruger shortly after purchase for the safety recall modification. I experienced impeccable customer service from Ruger. It is that experience that sold me on Ruger products. I cannot recall how many rounds I have put downrange with it. It is a tank, big, and heavy. It will eat any and all ammo ...

Ruger P85 MkII - posted in Gear: I just bought a Ruger P85 MkII from GAT today. Its very dirty (do they even clean them before putting up for sale??) and has a lot of blemishes. The price was right and everything I get my hands on I enjoy taking apart and working on so I am confident it will be a great gun when I am done. Does anyone have any experience with these?

Found a barely to gently used pre-'98 Ruger P85 (9mm) for $300. Fits my wishes for an economical 9mm single/double action first handgun. Reviews and opinions from those with experience with this gun would be much appreciated.

Price Check Ruger P85 | Springfield XD Forum

P85 9mm 100% 98% 95% $350 $295 $265 Subtract $30 if without case and extra magazine. Any P85 models without the "MKIIR" stamp must be returned to the factory for a free safety modification. I say put a price of 345 on the gun and it should sell.

The P89 is an upgraded P85 MKII that introduced a number of new features, including a DAO model. Like the P85, all P89s came with an investment cast aluminum alloy frame. In 1992, Ruger produced a limited-run P89X convertible model, which came with a second barrel and recoil spring assembly that allowed conversion between 9 mm and .30 Luger ...
