After being introduced to the idea of paper as a medium at art school, Calvin Nicholls' first paper sculpture was a collaboration with artist Jonathan Milne back in 1983, and he quickly felt the draw of working in paper. He uses heavy paper stock for structure and lighter paper for fur and fine detail, and he constantly refers to his drawings and study photos to ensure that the assembled pieces are true to the original plan.

The Scottish book sculptures are a group of book sculptures that were contrived to be "found" in Scotland between 2011 and 2013.

The sculptures are on topics mostly concerning Scottish literature and poetry, and are made out of old books by an anonymous female paper sculptor. The initial group of book sculptures was a group of ten elaborate sculptures that were left around various cultural locations in Edinburgh, Scotland, between March and November 2011, as gifts to the cultural institutions an

But, they ' re not tapestries at all—they're tiny pieces of rolled paper that look like string. Of course, some artists choose to celebrate paper art for what it is, and therefore don ' t try to hide its origins. One way this is done is through books. Both Isobelle Ouzman and Guy Laramée use discarded books as the starting point for their creations. Ouzman opens the book and extracts pieces of paper while Laramée transforms a novel ' s edges into sprawling mountainscapes.

Idea 2, buy some old books from the most famous writer from Denmark, Hans Christian Andersen. At the moment that idea came to mind, I was building this. So just buying Danish books which I couldn't read really wasn't sufficient. I had the idea to make a sculpture from the book, on top of the book. So H.C. Andersen's stories would come to life.
