There is a manual in the archive I'm pretty sure. If not I sent Basler a full manual to scan and post on the archive but don't know if he has done it yet. I have rebuilt both the HF-2 and HF-7's and the 7 is easier to do. Not a bad weekend project if you are mechanically minded. YOu can get all the seals etc from marine transmission.com Hope ...

Old Marine Engine: Paragon adjustment

The transmission is as far I can tell a Paragon 1XE model- fully manual.
The cover plate has been removed, the engine is to the right. The little bolt right in the middle of the image is the lockscrew that holds the screw collar in position like a collar around the threaded pressure plate (immediatly to its right).

In searching through the interweb, there are tons of marine transmissions and vdrives out there. I would like to explore other brands of transmission/vdrive combos out there, but am not sure what models will match the current set up. From the documentation - the Paragon PV41R is a 1 to 1 ratio and the Vdrive is listed at a 20 degree angle.

Hi, those are not Velvet Drives. They are Paragon V Drives. Velvet Drive is a line of marine gears produced by Borg Warner. Your Paragon was produced by Twin Disk. I have a velvet V drive in my 72 Luhrs. As far as the fluid level, I recommend that you find the proper manual for the transmissions to be sure.
