e Poetry (derived from the Greek poiesis, "making") is a form of literature that uses aesthetic and often rhythmic qualities of language —such as phonaesthetics, sound symbolism, and metre —to evoke meanings in addition to,
or in place of, the prosaic ostensible meaning.

making is an activism, good for expressing problems in words, to allow the problems to be begun to be understood by the mind of the occupant of the body whose mind is attached, and any other

Her main subject is the natural world and our relationship with it and the book is studded with a number of bravura pieces which – as Ted Hughes put it in Poetry in the Making (Faber, 1967) – manage to ‘capture’ something of creaturely lives.

Poetry in the Making: An Anthology by Ted Hughes

Poetry in the Making (London: Faber and Faber, 1967) Andy Armitage writes about Hughes's 'anthology' of creative writing. Poetry in the Making (1967) began as a series of 'talks' that Hughes wrote, and read, for the BBC Schools Broadcasting radio series Listening and Writing [1]. He expanded upon these talks and supplemented them with 'teacher notes' and 'exercises' so that the printed book could be used as a classroom resource;

as a teacher's handbook and an anthology of poems.

Drawn from Ted Hughes's celebrated programs for the BBC's "Listening and Writing" series, Poetry in the Making is a fresh, student-friendly discussion of what Hughes calls "imaginative writing." Offering generous citations from the work of several English-speaking, mostly modern or contemporary poets--including Hopkins, Dickinson, Eliot, Larkin, Plath, and himself--Hughes provides a useful and readable primer on "the kind of [poetry] writing children can do without becoming false to themselves."
