The Future of Nursing explores how nurses' roles, responsibilities, and education should change significantly to meet the increased demand for care that will be created by health care reform and to advance improvements in America's increasingly complex health system. At more than 3 million in number, nurses make up the single largest segment of the health care work force. They also spend the greatest amount of time in delivering patient care as a profession. Nurses therefore have valuable insights and unique abilities to contribute as partners with other health care professionals in improving the quality and safety of care as envisioned in the Affordable Care Act (ACA) enacted this year. Nurses should be fully engaged with other health professionals and assume leadership roles in redesigning care in the United States. To ensure its members are well-prepared, the profession should institute residency training for nurses, increase the percentage of nurses who attain a bachelor's degree to 80 percent by 2020, and double the number who pursue doctorates. Furthermore, regulatory and institutional obstacles -- including limits on nurses' scope of practice -- should be removed so that the health system can reap the full benefit of nurses' training, skills, and knowledge in patient care. In this book, the Institute of Medicine makes recommendations for an action-oriented blueprint for the future of nursing.

Providing holistic care to patients included care to the spirit, mind and body. Spiritual care needs to be administered and documented; however, in many instances, spiritual care and documentation of the care is greatly lacking. One barrier to the delivery of spiritual care by nurses is a lack of education regarding spiritual care. The purpose of this research project was to determine the influence of increased spiritual care education on nursing documentation of spiritual care in a long-term, acute-care hospital. The theoretical framework of the theory of human caring by Watson was chosen due to the relationship of the components of the spirit, mind, and body and how each one is interdependent on the other. Stoll's spiritual care assessment was incorporated into the education presentation. Knowles' theory of adult learning was used to deliver the information. The educational program was presented to a self-selected sample of 14 nurses and included pretest and posttest, PowerPoint presentation, and a review of the hospital's computerized documentation procedures. The nurses read two literature sources showed no change in the median scores of the pretest (90%) and posttest (90%). The chart audits completed before and after the education offering revealed no increase in the percentage of documentation of spiritual care. Implications for practice, research, and education were identified that will promote proper documentation of spiritual care to patients. Critical Thinking and Writing for
