During his time at the University of Pittsburgh, Joshua M. Patton studied and wrote nonfiction, fiction, and poetry. This is a collection of his best work from that time period. The first part of the book is literary fiction, short stories. Some have an inter-connected narrative, others stand alone. There are stories that play with the ideas of what stories even are. There are first-hand essays that feel like make-believe, and make-believe that seems as if it really happened. There are media analyses and histories from Rolling Stone to Fox News, including a story about Peggy Hull the first female war correspondent that history has mostly forgotten. This is a book like no other, and captures a snapshot in time of not just its subjects but of the author himself.

Every day, at least 1,191 Americans die before their time. They die painful, lingering deaths that could have been prevented. Every three days, as many citizens die from their own smoking habit, or from exposure to second-hand smoke, as died in the Sept 11 tragedy. Each and every pack of cigarettes costs American taxpayers $40 in higher medical premiums, unavailability of health services, and other hidden financial drains. And every year, 925 out of every 1,000 smokers who try to quit on their own fail to stay smoke-free for a year-while hundreds of thousands of children become addicted to nicotine. Dr. Michael Rabinoff, a respected psychiatrist who holds two patents and has published repeatedly in the New England Journal of Medicine and other top-flight journals, shows the health and financial suicide we commit by allowing tobacco companies to continue doing business as usual-and, like any good doctor, provides a detailed prescription for what to do about it: simple actions you can take to save the lives of millions around the world.
