"Or ever the knightly years were gone With the old world to the grave, I was a king in Babylon And you were a Christian slave," -W.E. Henley. His name was Charlie Mears; he was the only son of his mother who was a widow, and he lived in the north of London, coming into the City every day to work in a bank. He was twenty years old and suffered from aspirations. I met him in a public billiard-saloon where the marker called him by his given name, and he called the marker "Bullseyes." Charlie explained, a little nervously, that he had only come to the place to look on, and since looking on at games of skill is not a cheap amusement for the young, I suggested that Charlie should go back to his mother. That was our first step toward better acquaintance. He would call on me sometimes in the evenings instead of running about London with his fellow-clerks; and before long, speaking of himself as a young man must, he told me of his aspirations, which were all literary. He desired to make himself an undying name chiefly through verse, though he was not above sending stories of love and death to the drop-a-penny-in-the-slot journals.

The Phantom 'Rickshaw and Other Eerie Tales Bounty Books

As a young writer living in Lahore during the time of the British Raj, Rudyard Kipling (1865 – 1936) was possessed by an enormous subject—India—and his genius for rendering its beauty and strangeness was even then so fully formed that we have to look to the likes of Shakespeare and Dickens to find writers equally precocious. What is even more astonishing, and what this selection of stories from across his entire career reveals, is the way that his talent grew and developed over time. The work he did toward the end of his long writing life is even better than that which marked its splendid beginnings. The forty stories collected here range across a surprising variety of subjects and techniques. Here are his superb war stories, “ Mary Postgate, ” “ The Gardener, ” and “ The Drums of the Fore and Aft, ” as well as his famous forays into horror in “ The Mark of the Beast, ” science fiction in “ With the Night Mail, ” and the ghost story in “ The House Surgeon. ” “ The Man Who Would Be King ” is an unforgettable adventure tale, “ ‘ Love-o ’ -Women ’ ” and “ Without Benefit of Clergy ” reveal his insight into love and passion, and “ Baa Baa, Black Sheep ” is a searing revisiting of Kipling ’ s childhood trauma. From the nightmarish allegory of “ The Strange Ride of Morrowbie Jukes ” and the mystical visions in “ The Bridge-Builders ” to the brilliant portrait of obsession and sacrifice in his masterpiece, “ The Wish House, ” these stories showcase Kipling ’ s remarkable narrative gifts.
