Hug a Tree, Geronimo (Geronimo Stilton #69)

Scholastic Inc.

The Negro Motorist Green Book was a groundbreaking guide that provided African American travelers with crucial information on safe places to stay, eat, and visit during the era of segregation in the United States. This essential resource, originally published from 1936 to 1966, offered a lifeline to black motorists navigating a deeply divided nation, helping them avoid the dangers and indignities of racism on the road. More than just a travel guide, The Negro Motorist Green Book stands as a powerful symbol of resilience and resistance in the face of oppression, offering a poignant glimpse into the challenges and triumphs of the African American experience in the 20th century.

Lost Treasure of the Emerald Eye (Geronimo Stilton #1) Scholastic Inc.

"Does my mom pay you to talk to me?" We all want the best for our children, and we often see them in terms of how we would like to see ourselves: attending elite schools, vacationing in luxury hotels, wearing designer clothes, mastering admirable skills, making the right social connections, and enjoying all the myriad benefits of wealth, status, and privilege. But what if your daughter doesn't want to be a supermodel or learn to play Tchaikovsky on the piano? What if your son is shy rather than confident, and shows no interest in becoming a sports icon but would rather play quietly with his Legos? What should we really want for our children? What does it really take to make them happy? What are we teaching them about human worth in the example we set for them by the way we live? Elena Mincheva worked for a wealthy American family as a nanny and household helper, and her message to America's hard-working, middle-class parents who wish they could give their children "just a little more" is one of both hope and encouragement: Your children are not the sum of what you can or can't give them. You are enough. Your love is enough.
