Gender Ideologies and Military Labor Markets in the U.S. offers a comprehensive analysis of the relationship between changes in military gender ideologies and structural changes in U.S. military and society. By investigating how social and military change have influenced gender ideologies, the author develops an approach that (re-)connects military gender ideologies to the social conditions of their production and distribution and explains their transformation as effects of changing social and political relations and conflicts. Examining the role of different groups of social actors, media debates on women's military participation and gender ideologies inherent in depictions of military women, the author seeks to contextualise these ideologies are within structural change in the U.S. military and society, relating them to the gender-specific division of labour on civilian and military labor markets. This work provides a deeper understanding of the nexus between military re-structuring processes, women's military integration, and changes of gender ideologies in regard to war and the military, and will be of great interest to students and scholars of gender, security studies and American politics.

In 1963, CDC research scientist, Dr. Liam Frank, travels to Uganda to reunite with his girlfriend Penny and treat patients at a Peace Corps camp where she's teaching grade school. The minute he arrives, however, he's hijacked by Mwana, a master strategist from the war-torn Belgian Congo, who has far different plans for the talented disease control physician. Despite Liam's desire to prove himself to Penny, he's coerced into the lab to try to isolate and control a horrific new disease called Scream—which drags its victims through a bloody, screaming hell and leaves no survivors. In a tightly played game of pawns, knights and would-be kings, Liam is cast in the role of pawn. To survive and rescue Penny, he'll need to become a hero.

The mettle of the Elfin prince, Alathasas Summerfeather is tested as he seeks to bring honor back to his family. He believes that it was his hesitation in battle that cost the Elfin people of his father's kingdom their champion, Argent. The evil sorceress, N'wahr has taken the sword of Argent and Alathasas sets off to find the sword of the champion. On his quest, he enlists the aide of several adventurers, each of which proves to be more of a good friend than just "the hired help". An evil wizard plays on the arrogance of the prince's noble heritage, but the gentleman thief, Rywan Redwing reminds him that should the prince remain true to his beliefs, he will prevail. A mage-for-hire, Æjanarra teaches him that no matter what role one has in life, one should always live it completely. A Wylde-toothed Elfin savage, Coon teaches the noble self-sacrifice. Finally, when Prince Alathasas doubts the completion of his quest, an exotic psychic, Ja'Kalista helps him to remember the goals -to restore honor to his family's good name and that he has become rich with true friends.
