The Story of an American Masterpiece Bloomsbury Publishing

In the fall of 1958, when I was in the early months of my freshman year at Clark College (now Clark Atlanta University), a male first cousin, Albert "Shug" Hill, Jr. age 17, brother of six, an eleventh grader, Black youth, was shot and killed by the Hill's next door neighbor, one Earl Vance Shivers, age 36, father of seven, white. According to the local newspaper, Mr. Shivers said the teenager was looking through a window of the Shivers' home in which sat his wife and daughter. Albert's father sought to bring wrongful death charges against the man, but the Sheriff of that time, one Carlus Gay, refused to process such charges, reportedly saying that it was not allowed in the State of Georgia for a Black man to bring charges against any white man. Thus, there never was any justice exacted, commanded, adjudged, or meted, so for more than 63 years Albert "Shug" Hill, Jr. has lain a-molding in his grave all but forgotten. It is here in this small book, SHUG-Wrongful Death: Remembering the Forgotten, Exploring the Unknown, Seeking the Truth-that we commemorate him.

Proud Shug Dad Routledge

Growing up in a very small city of Natchitoches, Louisiana, the oldest one in the Louisiana Purchase, author, Bonita Grace Moses, was not only the youngest sibling but also the only girl, along with four brothers, born to Elena Moses. She was reared by her mother and her grandmother, Georgiana Moses, in a small three-room house. In Mama Shug: the Bridge Whom We Loved So Dearly, Moses shares her life story and how it was particularly influenced by her God-fearing grandmother, affectionately known as Mama Shug, who lived to the age of ninety-eight. This memoir narrates how Mama Shug quit school at age seven to care for her siblings, but she instilled the importance of a good education in her grandchildren. Full of wisdom, Moses' grandmother also preached how faith in the Lord was central to life. She was a woman who lived what she practiced. A testament to the strength, tenacity, spirituality, and love of Mama Shug, this memoir describes the life of one woman who paved the way and provided an important foundation helping her grandchildren achieve success.

Dead Bodies in Twentieth-century American Fiction

Ann Beattie, Annie Dillard, Maxine Hong Kingston, Toni Morrison, Cynthia Ozick, Grace Paley, Marge Piercy, Anne Redmon, Anne Tyler, and Alice Walker all seem to be especially concerned with narrative management. The ten essays in this book raise new and intriguing questions about the ways these leading women writers appropriate and transform generic norms and ultimately revise literary tradition to make it more inclusive of female experience, vision, and expression. The contributors to this volume discover diverse narrative strategies. Beattie, Dillard, Paley, and Redmon in divergent ways rely heavily upon narrative gaps, surfaces, and silences, often suggesting depths which are lamentably absent from modern experience or which mysteriously elude language. For Kingston and Walker, verbal assertiveness is the focus of narratives depicting the gradual empowerment of female protagonists who learn to speak themselves into existence. Ozick and Tyler disrupt conventional reader expectations of the "anti-novel" and the "family novel," respectively. Finally, Morrison's and Piercy's works reveal how traditional narrative forms such as the Bildungsroman and the "soap opera" are adaptable to feminist purposes. In examining the writings of these ten important women authors, this book illuminates a significant moment in literary history when women's voices are profoundly reshaping American literary tradition.
