Eduardo C. Corral's "Slow Lightning" is rapid electrocution. The language and imagery in his collection make even the hair on your arms stand up in full attention. He gets hit, stands up again, comes back for more. Corral's poetry is like the rolled "r" in the Spanish language: he wants to keep saying it, you want to keep hearing it.

Elliptically narrative, imagistic, musical, and fabular, the poems in Corral's debut poetry collection, Slow Lightning, explore the shadowy borderlands of both gay and Chicano identity while adapting and altering aspects of magical realism. In Corral's supernatural border culture, the stolen shadow of a vulture longs for its master; a mother's kneecaps emerge as watermarks in the rain; a son borrows his father's shirt as the gaze of the moon "stitches" the buttons to his skin; a ...

Model, Model, Model - Reading books using LAMP Words for Life

Winner of the Yale Younger Poets Prize, Slow Lightning is an astonishing debut book from Eduardo C. Corral. Sitting down to read it, one enters a space that at first seems familiar, and quickly reveals itself as completely new. In "To the Beastangel," Corral writes, "You release the finch. It wings towards me" (53).
