Blue Smoke From Exhaust Common

Causes And How To Fix

Bad seals. Burning oil usually is a result of damaged or faulty seals. The seals are designed to prevent oil from leaking into the valves where air and gasoline enter the engine ' s cylinders, combust and power your ATV. When the seals malfunction, oil gets in with the air and gasoline, leading to blue/gray smoke emitting your exhaust.

When SEALS Come Home - Book Series In Order

Check if there is too much oil in the oil reservoir and, if so, drain the excess oil and see if the exhaust continues to smoke. This is the most obvious cause of smoke when the engine burns oil. Inspect the cylinder heads, seals and pistons for wear. These faults can be caused by an engine overheating and can result in a blown head gasket.

Nothing could have prepared him for the inferno that ignites when he meets Kate. Smoking Hot When Seals Come Home 2 Anne Marsh 1. Bad Valve Seals (Not diesel cars). If you are not driving a diesel car, and you see blue smoke coming out of the exhaust, then the cause could be bad valve seals. Every vehicle has valves that open and close. These valves are designed to open mechanically by pressure from a Rocker Arm. They let air and gasoline come into the engine.
