Thoroughly updated throughout, A First Course in Linear Model Theory, Second Edition is an intermediate-level statistics text that fills an important gap by presenting the theory of linear statistical models at a level appropriate for senior undergraduate or first-year graduate students. With an innovative approach, the authors introduce to students the mathematical and statistical concepts and tools that form a foundation for studying the theory and applications of both univariate and multivariate linear models. In addition to adding R functionality, this second edition features three new chapters and several sections on new topics that are extremely relevant to the current research in statistical methodology. Revised or expanded topics include linear fixed, random and mixed effects models, generalized linear models, Bayesian and hierarchical linear models, model selection, multiple comparisons, and regularized and robust regression. New to the Second Edition: Coverage of inference for linear models has been expanded into two chapters. Expanded coverage of multiple comparisons, random and mixed effects models, model selection, and missing data. A new chapter on generalized linear models (Chapter 12). A new section on multivariate linear models in Chapter 13, and expanded coverage of the Bayesian linear models and longitudinal models. A new section on regularized regression in Chapter 14. Detailed data illustrations using R. The authors' fresh approach, methodical presentation, wealth of examples, use of R, and introduction to topics beyond the classical theory set this book apart from other texts on linear models. It forms a refreshing and invaluable first step in students' study of advanced linear models, generalized linear models, nonlinear models, and dynamic models.

Artists and curators have long reached beyond the constraints of established institutional structures and traditional exhibition spaces.

These tendencies were first clearly articulated (with some notable historical avant-garde precedents) in the language that framed conceptual and systems-based art in the 1960s and 1970s. The focus then, as it is today, was upon locating or creating alternative circuits. Today, notwithstanding our significantly technologically augmented capacity to reach and create new audiences, much contemporary artistic activity still invariably plays directly to an audience of connected peers. Moreover, given that much of this activity is now documented and disseminated as it happens through its surrounding peer network, the robustness of documentation and critical discussion can become easily distorted. Consequently, an inherent correlation to social acceptance and favorability can limit our capacity to meaningfully evaluate quality, and often excludes contributions outside a core group. Also, given that much art now shares media with other databases and websites, algorithmically driven perceptions of popularity can further influence ways in which art is evaluated, interpreted and valued. This situation invariably presents challenges to artists and curators seeking to establish new audiences or disseminate ideas. Today, new artistic and curatorial approaches are emerging in tandem with digitally-activated modes of presentation and dissemination distinguished by perpetual reproducibility, multiple intersecting temporalities and materializations, and the subsidence of physical space. Significantly, many of these approaches are no longer necessarily connected to singular events or spaces and are perhaps better understood as omnidirectional movements between modes of conception, production and dissemination connected through the screen as a communal space. This communal space might offer either access to new works, illuminate the existence of works understood to be elsewhere in time and space, or offer multiple or alternative materializations, versions, attributions, interpretations and representations of existing works. Artistic research can be represented in multiple ways as it moves between modes of conception, production and dissemination. This volume explores a broad range of questions associated with presenting, experiencing, discussing and evaluating art located anywhere and elsewhere in space and time. We are delighted to welcome you to the many worlds contained within.
