Some Rain Must Fall:
And Other Stories is a collection by Michel Faber, all stories published in 2000. I'm a great fan
of The Crimson Petal

Book of Strange New Things and after Faber transported me
to strange new worlds
with each new novel, I was curious where he'd take me with

fifteen short stories, particularly which genre they'd fall under.

Some, like "Some Rain

"Somewhere Warm and

fairly simple and straightforward, but compelling and deeply disturbing in their way. Others are mindbending in concept, like "Toy

who discovers a new planet that he plays with and observes in his room) and "Nina's

Hand" (told entirely from the perspective of a woman's right hand on its last day).
