I am a registered Sonos user, and NEVER received an email notice that my CR100 was end of life or that the latest SW update would render my CR100 unusable. I’m a rational person and fully expected Sonos to take care of all CR100 users. I found these threads and recently submitted a support request.

Thanks again for this guide. I just replaced the battery in my other CR100. I was again able to only lift the blue mat where the screws are. The replacement battery (from eBay) had the longer wires to the connector, just like the first one. The orange gasket was much better behaved this time -- it just stayed in its groove.
