extensive survey and analysis of over 100 current and historical feature description and machine vision methods, with a detailed taxonomy for local, regional and global features. This book provides necessary background to develop intuition about why interest point detectors and feature descriptors actually work, how they are designed, with observations about tuning the methods for achieving robustness and invariance targets for specific applications. The survey is broader than it is deep, with over 540 references provided to dig deeper. The taxonomy includes search methods, spectra components, descriptor representation, shape, distance functions, accuracy, efficiency, robustness and invariance attributes, and more. Rather than providing ' how-to ' source code examples and shortcuts, this book provides a counterpoint discussion to the many fine open source code resources available for hands-on practitioners.

TENS, or transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulation, is a pain treatment that uses low voltage electric current to scramble pain signals in your body. TENS is typically done with a TENS unit, a small battery-operated device. The device can be hooked to a belt and is connected to two electrodes. The electrodes carry an electric current from the TENS machine to the skin. Starting with recommended placements and TENS settings I experimented with different units, their settings, and placements until I found the ideal solution for my two different types of pain, Peripheral Neuropathy, and Sciatica. At the same time, I had two knees which had gone past the time when they should have been reconstructed, but Queensland Health was in a bad state nine years ago, and still is, so I've developed a great pain relief method using my TENS, that really and truly works for me. together with the specialist techniques for preservation and restoration of archival film. The book's data has its origins in a training programme called FILM which was written by members of the Gamma Group with funding from the EU fund Force. The committee comprised senior film archivists and technicians in charge of film conservation departments or working film laboratories within national film archives, together with technicians from commercial laboratories which specialise in archival film conservation and who do not work for national and local archives. The final group consisted of many of the most experienced individuals in their fields. Restoration of Motion Picture Film is an extremely informative, well-researched book which is an unmissable addition to the bookshelves of conservators, archivists and curators worldwide. Film history and film conservation students will also find it of great
