Structuralism picks up on this at the level of the sign (the signified—that locus of the concept and thus of truth; and the signifier—that locus of differences, substitutions and play.) The main section of "Structure, Sign and Play," is concerned with the trouble that Levi-Strauss gets into when trying simultaneously to operate with scientific principles (empiricism) and those that confirm the " structuration " principles typical of Nietzsche, Heidegger and Freud (bricolage). Structure, Sign, and Play by Jacques Derrida In the conclusion of his essay, Derrida observes that there are two ways to interpret structure, sign, and play. One seeks to decipher a truth or an origin, and avoids play. The other affirms play and tries to pass beyond man and humanism. The first way was dominant throughout human history. Derrida's Structure, Sign and Play in the Discourse of the Human Sciences remains one of the most significant documents of literary theory. It inaugurates what is known as post-structuralism in 1967. Post-structuralism does not mean an outright rejection of structuralism. Rather it means going beyond it by critiquing structuralism.

In "Structure, Sign, and Play in the Discourse of the Human Sciences", Derrida talks about how every structure needs to have some kind of center; it is the thing that keeps the structure together and holds it up. He claims that "even today the notion of a structure lacking any center represents the unthinkable itself".
