Only a small fraction of the millions of daily hazmat shipments interrupt their planned journey due to an incident that may severely threaten public and environmental safety. However, this threat of very rare but very severe consequences elevates the concern over transportation of hazmat through population centers. Furthermore, concern now exists over possible intentional hazmat releases and their use as a means to invoke human, economic, and environmental damage. It is vital for the transportation planning community at all levels to fully understand methods to effectively manage the movement of hazardous materials; thereby improving incident prevention and mitigation, increasing public safety, and reducing risk, without undue burden to commerce. This guidebook strives to answer common but critical questions concisely, present facts, and examples of management strategies. The intent is to also provide references for further information so that sub-state level transportation planners, in particular, are well informed and equipped to make optimal decisions regarding the transport of hazardous materials as prescribed by local conditions. How does this work? Everyone jokes about the ferocity of Maine winters, but driving in them is no laughing matter, which is why in order to get your driver's permit, you need to thoroughly study this: the Maine Driver's Handbook. Even if you've lived in Maine your entire life, there are probably things you don't know, and this latest version, which we pull directly from the Maine Bureau of Motor Vehicles page, contains only the very latest in laws and regulations. Once you feel comfortable with the handbook information, you can start practicing with our free Maine permit practice tests, so that you'll be prepared for the real exam. Finally, it'll be time to schedule the exam, and soon, you'll have a Maine driver's permit of your very own!

Poisoning is a far more serious health problem in the U.S. than has generally been recognized. It is estimated that more than 4 million poisoning episodes occur annually, with approximately 300,000 cases leading to hospitalization. The field of poison prevention provides some of the most celebrated examples of successful public health interventions, yet surprisingly the current poison control "system" is little more than a loose network of poison control centers, poorly integrated into the larger spheres of public health. To increase their effectiveness, efforts to reduce poisoning need to be linked to a national agenda for public health promotion and injury prevention. Forging a Poison Prevention and Control System recommends a future poison control system with a strong public health infrastructure, a national system of regional poison control centers, federal funding to support core poison control activities, and a national poison information system to track major poisoning epidemics and possible acts of bioterrorism. This framework provides a complete "system" that could offer the best poison prevention and patient care services to meet the needs of the nation in the 21st century.

Immutable Law #2

Saving lives is not our priority. Following our policies is our priority.

Protecting ourselves comes next. Avoiding lawsuits comes third.

You come somewhere after that. * * * I was not even out of school before I witnessed my first doctor commit murder. It would not be my last - Lord, no - but I can recall that night as vividly as though it happened last week. Few medics forget their first physician homicide. * * *

The ugly truth is some of the most macho medics on the planet turn into complete lollipops in the presence of an arrogant, incompetent physician. No matter how you parse it, that is professional cowardice. * * * K. Patrick McDonald is a graduate of UCSD La Jolla School of Medicine original Advanced Field Medicine program. He was appointed the first EMS Supervisor for the City of San Diego under Mayor (and then Governor) Pete Wilson's administration. He created one of the nation's first STAR (Special Trauma & Rescue) Teams and co-authored the San Diego City Disaster Preparedness Plan. He was a co-author of the National Waterpark Lifeguard Training Manual. He has acted as consultant to the U.S. Secret Service in Presidential Protection matters.
