There are many examples of alcohol use, including The Sheriff of Nottingham promises a "butt of ale" to the winner of a shooting contest. There is always drinking when there is feasting. At Little John's christening, they have a barrel of ale. Robin and the Tinker go to a local inn to drink ale together. Robin asks the host to put additional alcohol in the Tinker's ale. Robin Hood gets the Tinker so drunk that the Tinker passes out. John drinks ale and buys ale for many at the fair and at inns. Little John spends the night drinking at the Blue Boar Inn on his way to get Lincoln green cloth from a man in Ancaster.

Restored Stories in an oversized format Ray Willner was a casualty of the culture wars. With a comics career dating to 1939, Willner produced impressive work for publishers small and large throughout the 1940s. By 1949 he landed one of the only steady gigs in his career for an unusual publisher: The Brown Shoe Company. While working initially on their Buster Brown Comic Book a giveaway created to drum up business in stores selling Brown's footwear for kids Willner found a simpatico spirit in fellow artist Reed Crandall. Although their collaboration on the Brown Shoe Co. series The Adventures of Robin Hood lasted less than a year cancelled in the
