Let me begin by saying that this is an important book for those interested in understanding the mind of Lawrence Durrell. The first novel published under his own name, The Black Book (published in France in 1938) is the work wherein Durrell found his voice as a writer. He wrote it over a period of about sixteen months when he was twenty-four and living on the island of Corfu.

Lawrence Durrell: The Black Book. The latest addition to my website is Lawrence Durrell's The Black Book. This was Durrell's first novel, written when he was twenty-two and published in France when he was twenty-four (it was considered too obscene to be published unexpurgated in England). It has some of the hallmarks of a first novel by a twenty-two year old, in particular its over-flowery language.

By Lawrence Durrell The Black Book is told from the perspectives of two men who observe the devastation of war and its effects on the guests of a London hotel. Complete with surrealist musings on death and decay, it captures the rough and angry attitude of a country on the brink of a second world war.

The Black Book. - Peter Harrington

Lawrence Durrell: The Black Book. This was Durrell's first novel, published when he was twenty-four but written when he was twenty-two. He had sent the manuscript to Henry Miller, suggesting that he should read it and then throw it in the Seine but Miller thought it showed promise. T S Eliot had considered publishing it for Faber & Faber but only in an expurgated edition so Durrell finally had it published in Paris.
