Beautifully written, "The Book of Memory", by Petina Gappah, is the gripping story with enough wit (some hilarious malapropisms) to get you through the darkness. The protagonist, Memory, who has albinism, is narrating the story from a Zimbabwe prison where she is sentenced to death for the murder of the white man who "bought" her from her parents.

The Book of Memory review – a vivid life story from death row. Petina Gappah powerfully probes the tricky nature of memory through the story of Memory, or Mnemosyne, an albino woman consigned to Chikurubi prison in Harare, Zimbabwe, convicted of murdering a wealthy white man, Lloyd, her adopted father.

"The Book of Memory is not only a very fine ethnographic study of folk psychology and an exemplary study of material culture (medieval
