The word "creed" comes from its opening word in Latin, credo ("I believe") or credimus ("we believe"). Not all religions even have creeds. Belief as such is not nearly so central to most other religions as it is to Christianity. Creed: What Christians Believe and Why - Jesus

The Apostles' Creed begins, "I believe in God, the Father Almighty, creator of heaven and earth." Christians believe there is a God, a Supreme Being, an Ultimate Reality that created the universe. Many would be willing to use the term "God" when referring to the creative and powerful forces that gave rise to, and hold together, the universe as we know it – forces such as the mysterious "dark energy" of astrophysics. *Creed, The.
