Dashiell Hammett's second novel featuring The Continental Op (Red Harvest), The Dain Curse (1929) is another great hard-boiled yarn. This story concerns a well drawn femme fatale-Miss Gabrielle Dain Leggett-a young, wealthy, morphine addict who is part of a religious cult. People have a habit of dying around her, hence the "Dain Curse."

Dash Hammett was the first of the great hardboiled detective authors, and this volume provides a spread of his work from a tight little short story through to the Dain Curse's convolutions that would do Chandler proud, through to a look from the other side, with a criminal's meandering through conspiracy and politics in the Glass Key.

Perhaps it is the structure of the book, broken into three sections loosely tied together, THE DAIN CURSE features Hammett's best detective, the portly and nameless Continental Op. Called in to investigate diamonds stolen from the elderly Edgar Leggett, the Op soon learns of the curse which mysteriously follows the family and which also, incidentally, leaves a lot of people dead.
