The dancing girls of Lahore inhabit the Diamond Market in the shadow of a great mosque.

The twenty-first century goes on outside the walls of this ancient quarter but scarcely registers within. Though their trade can be described with accuracy as prostitution, the dancing girls have an illustrious history: Beloved by emperors and nawabs, their sophisticated art encompassed the best of Mughal culture.

British sociologist Brown documents the sex-trade in Lahore. Meet Maha, a middle-aged mother who lives and works in the walled city at the heart of Lahore. Her trade? She's a dancing girl—that is, prostitute. But having hit her 30s and put on a few pounds, she can no longer command the prices she needs to keep her children fed.
