The writing of Expression. Darwin originally intended to publish his work on expression in Descent of Man (1871), but the material grew too large and required a separate book, The Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals (1872). The Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals is Charles Darwin's third major work of evolutionary theory, following On the Origin of Species (1859) and The Descent of Man (1871). Initially intended as a chapter in The Descent of Man, The Expression grew in length and was published separately in 1872.

November's book of the month focuses on The expression of the emotions in man and animals, the final text in his "great evolutionary cycle of writing". 1 The Expression is a fascinating work: one of Darwin's most accessible and readable studies, it was one of the first scientific works to use photographic illustrations, and it was a bestseller in its day. Yet, it has been long neglected by academics and the general public alike and today remains one of Darwin's less recognised titles.
