Hugh Mackay (Author of The Good Life)

This new book, "The Good Life," is different. It is philosophical. It espouses a view as to what makes a life "good" and comes down firmly on it being a life "lived for others." Mackay argues the pursuit of personal fulfillment or happiness or other self-centred goal is not the right objective. This is a very "worthy" book.

“ we might do well to accept that a noble, courageous, well-lived life is one in which we are equipped to experience and negotiate the full range of emotions: neither seduced by the lure of happiness nor obsessed by the grim and gritty aspects of life, but open to whatever comes and ready to learn from it all. ” Hugh Mackay, The Good Life

Hugh Mackay Quotes (Author of The Good Life)

The good life is not the sum of our security, wealth, status, postcode, career success and levels of happiness. The good life is one defined by our capacity for selflessness, the quality of our relationships and our willingness to connect with others in a useful way. Mackay examines what is known as the Golden Rule through the prisms of religion, philosophy, politics, business and family life.

Hugh Mackay defines the good life as one lived for others - "defined by our capacity for selflessness, the quality of our relationships and our willingness to connect with others in a useful way." Mackay suggests that our focus on ourselves, the misplaced importance on accumulating money and possessions is leading us into a misguided idea of a good life.
