The Medieval Inquisition was a series of Inquisitions from around 1184, including the Episcopal Inquisition and later the Papal Inquisition. The Medieval Inquisition was established in response to movements considered apostate or heretical to Christianity, in particular Catharism and Waldensians in Southern France and Northern Italy. These were the first inquisition movements of many that would follow. The Cathars were first noted in the 1140s in Southern France, and the Waldensians around 1170

A History of the Inquisition of the Middle Ages; volume I ...

Inquisition, a judicial procedure and later an institution that was established by the papacy and, sometimes, by secular governments to combat heresy. Derived from the Latin verb inquirō ("inquire into"), the name was applied to commissions in the 13th century and subsequently to similar structures in early modern Europe.

A History of The Inquisition of The Middle Ages: Lea ...

The Inquisition 'proper' was an official and organized campaign by the church of Rome over this 3 - 400 year period to eliminate heresy. Heresy as, Lea explains, a crime of belief. The Church was all-powerful, and felt compelled to suppress any beliefs contrary to official dogma.

The Inquisition started out as a way to fight against evil, but very quickly became another tool to control people. The Power of the Church: The Catholic church was the supreme power during most of the medieval period. Some of the ways the church exercised its power includes the flow of wealth, the use of sacraments to control people and their lives, the use of Church councils, the propaganda value of the religious beggars (friars), and finally, the horrible cruelty of the Inquisition and ...

The Inquisition in the Middle Ages used any means necessary to receive a confession from those charged, and were able to change the ways of certain practices that were being done in several different countries. There were many Inquisitions that presented themselves through the Middle Ages, but the original one was that of the Catholic Church.
