The Late Starters Orchestra has its author, Ari Goldman, getting reacquainted with the cello in his fifties. As he approaches the age of sixty, he's determined to learn enough to play a few songs for his friends at his 60th birthday party. It's difficult, with his job as journalism professor at Columbia University and a lively family.

As a late-starter violist (who has played cello since age 8), I loved the book! Goldman's passion for his instrument (a cello named Bill) and playing fear of auditions (that would be many of us non-conservatory types), information on the cello in general, and retelling of the stories of other late starters makes a wonderful read.

THE LATE STARTERS ORCHESTRA. By Ari L. Goldman. Algonquin. 290 pp. $23.95. It comes all too rarely now, perhaps only once or twice a year: the urge to retrieve my violin from its dusty case and attempt a few lines of Bach or Brahms. I used to play the violin rather well, but upon moving to Washington in the mid-'90s, I stopped.

This is the Late Starters Orchestra--the bona fide amateur string orchestra where Ari Goldman pursues his lifelong dream of playing the cello. Goldman hadn't seriously picked up his cello in twenty-five years, but the Late Starters (its motto, If you think you can play, you can) seemed just the right orchestra for this music lover whose busy life had always gotten in the way of its pursuit.
