The newspaper refers to the body only as Victim 2117 - the 2117th refugee to die in the Mediterranean Sea. But to three people, the unnamed victim is so much more, and the death sets off a chain of events that throws Department Q, Copenhagen's cold cases division led by Detective Carl Mørck, into a deeply dangerous - and deeply personal - case.

Christine Falls (Quirke #1) by Benjamin Black

Banville also writes under the pen name Benjamin Black. His first novel under this pen name was Christine Falls, which was followed by The Silver Swan in 2007. Banville has two adult sons with his wife, the American textile artist Janet Dunham.

The Lemur Benjamin Black

The Lemur Benjamin Black

Benjamin Black is the crime-writing pen name for literary author John Banville, which goes a long way toward explaining the manner in which THE LEMUR blurs genres to the point where they are not only indistinct but also irrelevant. I was reminded in a number of ways of THE GREAT GATSBY, not the least of them being the quality

Review: The Lemur by Benjamin Black | Books | The Guardian

This is the third Benjamin Black book I have read in a few days. I am as addicted to his writing as his characters are to cigarettes and alcohol. It is true that the "mystery" is interesting: A burned out journalist hires a researcher to assist him in finding detail so that he can write his father-in-law's biography -- a biography that the ...

Serialized killer. The Lemur, Banville/Black's latest, forsakes the pathologist Quirke and his seedy postwar Dublin for John Glass, a once-celebrated journalist now married to money and idling in a glittering present-day Manhattan. Appointed by his autocratic father-in-law, Bill Mulholland, to write his official biography, Glass hires a researcher,...
