Book review: The Risk of Darkness. This is a chilling book with two key storylines. One is continued from the previous book, The Pure in Heart, in which children are disappearing. The second explores the line where grief and anger descends into madness, where we can be threatened in our homes, in the streets which are familiar beneath our feet, and will never feel safe again.

The Risk of Darkness (Simon Serrailer, #3) by Susan Hill
The protagonist, Simon Serrailer, is not 'likeable,' exactly, but he is intelligent, complex and interesting, while the (many) supporting characters are well drawn and deftly three-dimensional. The Risk of Darkness is definitely the most somber of the three I've read so far, and in its primary perpetrator gives one of the most chilling depictions of human evil that I have come across recently.

The Risk of Darkness. A kidnapper is at large, a schoolboy has disappeared - there are no leads, no closure. The Risk of Darkness picks up where The Pure in Heart left off. Then Detective Chief Inspector Simon Serrailier receives a call: a child has been snatched in Yorkshire. Has the abductor struck again?

very much enjoyed the series so far and I will be putting book no. 4 on my reserve list soon. However, I would offer some cautions to a fan of straightforward whodunnits and police procedurals about Susan Hill's style.

In this, the 10th Simon Serrailler crime novel, Simon must engage with his own demons as Lafferton struggles to cope with a series of crimes that threaten the sanctity of hearth and home. On the face of it DCS Simon Serrailler has had time to recuperate after the violent incident that cost him his arm and nearly his life.

The Risk of Darkness : Susan Hill : 9780099535027

We met Simon Serrailler first in The Various Haunts of Men and got to know him better in The Pure in Heart. Susan Hill's third crime novel, The Risk of Darkness-perhaps even more compulsive and convincing than its predecessors-explores the crazy grief of a widowed husband, whose derangement turns into obsession and threats, violence and terror.
