Went to visit the Roman Villa at Brading for the first time since 1977. First point I noticed was there was a completely new building, which also contained a restaurant and a larger shop.
We were told all about the villa in a similar way to how we were told last time, and there

Brading - Wikipedia

My wife and I visited a really interesting Roman Villa in Newport, Isle of Wight and the staff member on duty there said you must visit Brading Roman Villa as it is much larger and has a restaurant. We went to it and it was a very large modern building.

PS: as it happens, the following day, taking tea at Brading Roman Villa, we picked up a well illustrated biography of Alexander the Great, by Mary Renault, whom I used to read when young, published by the very same people, Pantheon, who published PHI, mentioned above and noticed at reference 1 below.
